Challenge

This dramatic location in the foothills of the Malverns, with its sloping topography and large number of protected trees, made the logistics of this large-scale luxury development tricky for the roofers NRA Roofing.

6 new residential blocks were built around 3 restored grand Victorian mansions which house the communal areas of the retirement Village. Architects Gaunt Francis sought to complement the original Victorian architecture in their design of the new buildings, by echoing some of the design themes and by using authentic traditional building materials.

Solution

NRA Roofing explains: "We laid all the tiles, bitumen felt on the top flat roofs, as well as the lead work down onto the tiles and around the dormers. Each block had around 900m² of tiling, with considerable vertical tiling on the gable ends of the Staffordshire Blue roofs. We are always pleased to be working with Dreadnoughts as we know they are always high quality. If we are working with a lesser quality, more mass-produced tile we may have to sort through the product before we can start using it and that costs time and money".

Result

NRA Roofing have done a beautiful job and Dreadnought are delighted that this project was a finalist at the UK Roofing Awards 2019.
